NOTE FOR: Acting Director of Central Intelligence

FROM: Dave Gries DG/KS

SUBJECT: Diplomatic Security Act

Attached are all the pertinent documents.
Tab A explains the problem. Tab B is language that will fix the problem. Tab C is a side-by-side comparison of the House and Senate versions of the Act. Tab D is a comparison of the Senate and House legislative reports.

At this writing, Senate at staff level has receded to House language on Section 106(b).
That represents 50% of what we have been trying to achieve. We are continuing to work on 103(b) in the expectation that we can introduce conference language that will meet our concerns.

The Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (H.R. 4151) to provide enhanced diplomatic security and combat international terrorism, and for other purposes, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment and recommends that the bill as amended do pass.

COMMITTEE ACTION

While reviewing the issue of the security of our overseas diplomatic missions, the Committee on Foreign Relations held four public hearings, one closed hearing, and one mark-up session.

On July 16, 1985, the committee received public testimony from Admiral Bobby R. Inman, Chairman of the Secretary of State's Advisory Commission on Overseas Security, on the findings and recommendations of that panel. On July 17, 1985, Admiral Inman returned to testify in closed session and was joined by Assistant Secretary of State for Administration Robert Lamb.

On January 23, 1986, Senator Lugar introduced, by request, S. 2015, an Administration proposal to improve security for our diplomatic personnel and facilities overseas. The bill was read twice and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

On February 4, 1986, the committee received testimony from Secretary of State George Shultz on behalf of the Administration proposal. Accompanying the Secretary were Ronald I. Spiers, Under Secretary of State for Management, and Mr. Robert Lamb, Director of the Bureau of Diplomatic Security.

Section 103—Responsibility of the Secretary of State

Subsection (A) requires the Secretary of State to develop and implement, within the scope of resources available, policies and programs, including funding levels and standards, to provide for the security of U.S. Government operations overseas of a diplomatic nature only and foreign government operations of a diplomatic nature in the United States. Paragraph (1) of this subsection specifies that for purposes of this act the authority and responsibility of the Secretary of State extends to all U.S. Government personnel who are abroad on official duty other than those under the command of a U.S. area military commander. The Secretary of State is equally responsible for the security of dependents of U.S. official personnel abroad. Similarly, under paragraph (2) the Secretary's responsibility extends to the establishment and operation of security functions at all U.S. Government missions abroad.

Paragraph (3) extends the Secretary's responsibility to Department of State facilities in the United States. Paragraph (4) states the Secretary's authority regarding protection of foreign missions, foreign officials and international organizations.

Subsection (b) restates and clarifies responsibilities assigned to the Secretary of State by the President in his letters to Chiefs of Mission of September 23, 1981, and makes explicit the responsibilities implicitly assigned to the Secretary by section 207 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3927). Since one of the basic purposes of this legislation is to clarify the chain of command and ensure accountability at U.S. civilian posts abroad by making the Secretary and the Chief of Mission responsible for the direction and management of the Government's civilian overseas security program, it is necessary to restate and make explicit the Secretary's overall responsibility for the management and coordination of overseas post functions.

Otherwise, it would be impossible to hold the Secretary responsible for any part of the Diplomatic Security Program. Thus subsection (b)(2) makes the Secretary responsible for overseeing and determining the level of all official government staffing (other than for activities under the direction of U.S. military area commander). This responsibility is critical to the success of the Diplomatic Security Program to be implemented pursuant to this Act.

Furthermore, this responsibility is also essential in this time of budget constraint. The committee expects the Secretary will use this authority to reduce the size and possibly the number of U.S. missions for reasons of both security and economy as urged on several occasions during the consideration of this legislation.

For purposes of titles I through IV, subsection (c) defines the term "federal agency" as department or agency of the United States.

Section 103—Responsibility of the Secretary of State

Subsection (A) requires the Secretary of State to develop and implement, within the scope of resources available, policies and programs, including funding levels and standards, to provide for the security of U.S. Government operations overseas of a diplomatic nature only and foreign government operations of a diplomatic nature in the United States. Paragraph (1) of this subsection specifies that for purposes of this act the authority and responsibility of the Secretary of State extends to all U.S. Government personnel who are abroad on official duty other than those under the command of a U.S. area military commander. The Secretary of State is equally responsible for the security of dependents of U.S. official personnel abroad. Similarly, under paragraph (2) the Secretary's responsibility extends to the establishment and operation of security functions at all U.S. Government missions abroad.

Subsection (b) restates and clarifies responsibilities assigned to the Secretary of State by the President in his letters to Chiefs of Mission of September 23, 1981 and makes explicit the responsibilities implicitly assigned to the Secretary by section 207 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3927). Since one of the basic purposes of this legislation is to clarify the chain of command and ensure accountability at U.S. civilian posts abroad by making the Secretary and the Chief of Mission responsible for the direction and management of the Government's civilian overseas security program, it is necessary to restate and make explicit the Secretary's overall responsibility for the management and coordination of overseas post functions.

Otherwise, it would be impossible to hold the Secretary responsible for any part of the Diplomatic Security Program. Thus subsection (b)(2) makes the Secretary responsible for overseeing and determining the level of all official government staffing (other than for activities under the direction of U.S. military area commander). This responsibility is critical to the success of the Diplomatic Security Program to be implemented pursuant to this Act.

Furthermore, this responsibility is also essential in this time of budget constraint. The committee expects the Secretary will use this authority to reduce the size and possibly the number of U.S. missions for reasons of both security and economy as urged on several occasions during the consideration of this legislation and recently recommended by the Vice President's Task Force on Combating Terrorism.

For purposes of titles I through IV, subsection (c) defines the term "federal agency" as department or agency of the United States.

Section 106—Cooperation of other Federal agencies

Subsection (a) imposes an obligation on other Federal agencies to cooperate to the maximum extent possible with the Department of State to facilitate the fulfillment of its security responsibilities. To that end, this subsection provides that, such agencies, through agreement, may render assistance, with or without reimbursement, to the Department of State.

Furthermore it is expressly provided that such agencies may provide logistic support, perform security inspections and other overseas security functions as authorized by the Secretary of State. Assistance of this nature would be appropriate in circumstances, for example, involving the facilities of other agencies. In such cases, the legislation authorizes the Secretary of State, if he so chooses, to delegate operational control, subject, however, to the Secretary's overall responsibility.

To ensure the full implementation of titles I-IV of this act, the Department of State and other foreign affairs agencies should work together in security survey teams. The Assistant Secretary of the Bureau for Diplomatic Security shall ensure that any disagreements between foreign affairs agencies, or between a foreign mission and the Department of State are resolved in an expeditious manner, taking into consideration the views and needs of all parties.

Subsection (b) makes clear that nothing in title I through IV of this act shall be construed to limit or impair the authority of any Federal, State or local authority with respect to law enforcement, domestic security operations or intelligence activities.

Section 103 gives the Secretary of State authority to set manning levels at all overseas missions. In the event of a disagreement between the Secretary's authority in Section 103 and subsection (b) of this section, the President shall resolve the matter.

Subsection (c) expedites the process of providing office space for the personnel needed by the Department to carry out its security-related activities, by approving a lease by GSA of necessary space, subject to appropriation.

Section 106—Cooperation of other agencies

Subsection (a) imposes an obligation on other Federal agencies to cooperate to the maximum extent possible with the Department of State to facilitate the fulfillment of its security responsibilities. To that end, this subsection provides that, such agencies, through agreement, may render assistance, with or without reimbursement, to the Department of State.

Furthermore it is expressly provided that such agencies may provide logistic support, perform security inspections and other overseas security functions as authorized by the Secretary of State. Assistance of this nature would be appropriate in circumstances, for example, involving the facilities of other agencies. In such cases, the legislation authorizes the Secretary of State, if he so chooses, to delegate operational control, subject, however, to the Secretary's overall responsibility.

To ensure the full implementation of titles I-IV of this act, the Department of State and other foreign affairs agencies should work together in security survey teams. The Assistant Secretary of the Bureau for Diplomatic Security shall ensure that any disagreements between foreign affairs agencies, or between a foreign mission and the Department of State are resolved in an expeditious manner, taking into consideration the views and needs of all parties.

Subsection (b) makes clear that nothing in title I through IV of this act shall be construed to limit or impair the authority of any Federal, State or local authority with respect to law enforcement or domestic security operations.

Subsection (c) expedites the process of providing office space for the personnel needed by the Department to carry out its security-related activities, by approving a lease by GSA of up to 250,000 square feet, subject to appropriation.
